A nine-member accreditation team representing the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) and the Kansas State Board of Education (KSDE) visited the ESU campus October 25-29, 1997, to review all graduate and undergraduate teacher education and school personnel preparation programs. Although we will not know the final outcome until later this year, the exit report was QUITE positive! The team was quite complimentary about the technology available, particularly for student use, throughout the campus; the multicultural emphasis throughout the general studies, content courses, and professional courses; the number of new programs of study initiated since the 1992 visit; proposed new programs which are pending approval; faculty scholarship and leadership in state organizations; central office support for teacher education/personnel preparation; the active involvement of faculty from the School of Business, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and School of Library and Information Management in the delivery and governance of personnel preparation programs; and the overt support of P-12 school personnel for our programs of study. Also mentioned as strengths were our admissions standards for graduate and undergraduate programs; our efforts toward increasing diversity among our student population; the long history of our governance structures (Committee on Advanced Programs and the Council on Teacher Education); our Professional Development Schools in Emporia and Olathe; and the many resources available to our students including the William Allen White Library, Math and Science Resource Center, the numerous computer labs throughout the campus, and the instructional television classroom housed in Visser Hall.

Only one weakness was noted: the emphasis on global perspectives in the general education curriculum needs to be strengthened.

We wish to extend our thanks to those of you who submitted letters to the NCATE Board of Examiners on behalf of The Teachers College and our educational personnel preparation programs. We consider you to be partners in education and value your support in this important program review. To say the least, we are quite pleased with the very positive review we received from the combined accreditation teams!

Our only unmet standard was that our student body (those pursuing teacher education) is lacking in cultural diversity.
News From The Divisions

- Counselor Education and Rehabilitation Programs
  - The division of CERP has received the accreditation report from the Council for the Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP). Mental Health Counseling and Student Personnel Services in Higher Education received seven years accreditation and the School Counseling program was accredited for two years. The latter accreditation period allows time for students of the former 38-credit-hour program to graduate from the recently revised 48-credit-hour program. Dr. Ed Butler, chair of CERP is confident that after the students of the former program have graduated, the new program will receive the full seven-year accreditation.
  - The division hosted the 2nd Annual Conference for At-Risk Children & Youth, October 16-17, 1997. Coordinated by Dr. Deanna Haves and Pat Neufeld in collaboration with ESU’s Office of Continuing Education, the conference was designed to help schools become proactive in addressing the needs of at-risk children and youth. More than 85 teachers, counselors, administrators, health educators, and parents met to share programs that have worked and to learn more about new strategies for helping at-risk students. Dr. Richard Nelson from the University of Kansas provided the keynote address titled “The Power to Prevent Suicide.” ESU faculty presenting included Dr. Tara Azwell, Dr. Larry Lyman, Dr. Donna Allen, Dr. P. Kay Duncan, Dr. Festus Obiakor, Dr. Michael Richard, and Dr. Gary Wyatt.
  - Dr. Ed Butler was co-coordinator and a presenter for the 48th Annual Fall Conference for Counselors held at ESU on September 12, 1997, and sponsored by the division of CERP and the Division of Learning Services of the Kansas State Department of Education. The theme of the conference was “Legal and Ethical Aspects of Counseling.” Over 400 participants attended the conference.
  - The Kansas Student Personnel Fall Conference was held October 2-3, 1997, on the ESU campus. The event was a cooperative venture sponsored by the Kansas College Student Personnel Association (KCSPA), Kansas Association for Student Personnel Administrators (KASPA), and Kansas Association of

- Early Childhood/Elementary Teacher Education
  - Dr. Carol Marshall coordinated collaboration among ESU, Butler County Community College, and Head Start programs in Salina, Wichita, and Manhattan for a Reggio Emilia training workshop held October 3-6, 1997, at ESU and BCCC. Reggio Emilia is a high-quality approach and philosophy in early childhood education. Lella Gandini, an international expert in early childhood education from Reggio Emilia, Italy, and two researchers, one from the Detroit, Michigan, Head Start program and one from the Merrill-Palmer Institute, were guest facilitators. In all, over 400 people were involved from across the state, with 91 persons taking the workshop for credit from ESU. Kansas has the most adaptations of Reggio Emilia of anywhere else in the United States due to the hard work of many people. Weekend seminars addressing Reggio Emilia concepts will be offered the second and third weekends in June 1998.
  - Dr. Scott Irwin and Dr. Nancy Smith, along with Dr. Ron Keith from the ESU department of physics, attended a conference in Washington, D.C., to deliver a poster presentation on ESU Project NOVA which has funded their work on curricular revision of elementary teacher preparation courses to align the prerequisite math and science courses with the math and science methods courses. The course revisions are based on state and national science and math standards and NASA strategic enterprises. Their poster session was one of eight in the nation to receive top recognition.

The ninth annual Hubbard Summer Academy for Future Teachers was held July 13-18, 1997, on the ESU campus. Coordinated by the Jones Institute, the academy graduated 54 Kansas high school students for a total of 475 graduates since its inception in 1989. Funded by the R.D. and Joan Dale Hubbard Foundation of Ruidoso, NM, since 1990, the academy has provided select students with the opportunity to learn more about the challenges and rewards of teaching. Applications for the 1998 academy will be mailed January 16 to the counselors and principals of all Kansas public and private high schools and FEA sponsors. For more information, contact Dr. Leo Pauls, director of the academy, at 800-543-3750 or email <warrenel@emporia.edu>.

The Teachers College inauguration activities for President Kay Schallenkamp will be held on Monday, February 9, 1998. Included in these activities will be an address by the spring 1998 Jones Distinguished Lecturer, Dr. Sharon Robinson, vice-president for teaching and learning at Educational Testing Services in Princeton, NJ, and former U.S. Assistant Secretary of Education.

ESU and the Jones Institute for Educational Excellence are joining forces with the Kansas State Department of Education and Washburn University to develop the Institute on School Violence, a multi-phase, comprehensive program addressing school violence prevention and intervention. A $50,042 grant from the Kansas Health Foundation will help make the institute a reality. The mission of the Institute is to facilitate the development and implementation of individualized action plans for schools/distRICTS to address issues of school violence in a comprehensive and on-going manner. The Institute will begin with a six-day residential program July 26-31, 1998, at Tall Oaks Conference Center in Linwood, KS; and will be followed by year-long implementation support, and a review symposium approximately one year after the program phase. For more information or to register, call Linda Hazel, Jones Institute, at 800-543-3750.

The Jones Institute will host an early literacy/reading recovery conference on Monday, March 2, 1998, at ESU. The keynote speaker will be Bill Koch of the Koch Crime Commission. The Jones Institute also will host a school choice conference April 2-3 on campus. More information will be mailed out to Kansas educators in January 1998. If you live out of state and would like information, contact Carolyn Strand for the early literacy/reading recovery conference, or Dr. Leo Pauls for the school choice conference, at the Jones Institute at 800-543-3750.

Dr. Leo W. Pauls, executive director of the Jones Institute, was named a 1997-98 Kansas Distinguished Educator by the Kansas State Department of Education. A review panel selected the distinguished educators based on their creativity, innovation and management skills, communication skills, ability to motivate students and peers, and leadership skills. As a Kansas Distinguished Educator, Dr. Pauls will be called upon to assist school districts in their improvement process by giving fresh ideas to schools searching for innovative and improved ways to reach students.

The Jones Institute for Educational Excellence’ website has been newly revised and offers information on our various activities and projects. Look it up on the ESU website under The Teachers College.

The Teachers College has received national recognition for its multicultural/diversity education efforts by the United States Department of Education’s National Institute on Postsecondary Education, Libraries, and Lifelong Learning. It recently awarded The Teachers College a $342,633 three-year grant, one of only seven grants funded under this competition.

The funding will be used to establish a formal assessment to evaluate the effectiveness of multicultural/diversity education in both the general education and the teacher education programs at ESU. The assessment project is a collaborative effort between The Teachers College and the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

“The growth of cultural diversity in the United States is one of the most significant demographic trends in recent decades. The U.S. Census Bureau estimates that by the year 2000, one in three children will be of a racial or ethnic background other than white,” said Dr. Jerry Long, associate dean of The Teachers College and grant project director.

“Personnel preparation programs must prepare pre-service teachers and other school personnel to work successfully in a multicultural and diverse environment. An extensive review of the literature indicates that universities are not evaluating their programs to determine whether their graduates are meeting their multicultural or diversity outcomes. The Teachers College decided to do something about it,” he added.

The grant from the U.S. Department of Education will allow the expansion of assessment and the development of a content area test in multicultural education and diversity. During the second year of the grant, a web site will be constructed, and will include multicultural/diversity research results. In addition, a listserve will be established for those who wish to discuss research questions related to multicultural/diversity research effort.

Dr. Anthony Ambrosio has been employed full time to direct the project which will begin in January 1998. Dr. Ambrosio received his Ph.D. from the University of Northern Colorado and currently is on the faculty of Wichita State University.
