"Book Talk"

Do you have a favorite romance novel?

"Jude Deveraux's A Knight in Shining Armor was always my favorite romance. I used to travel a lot around the world, and, not only did I take the book with me and re-read it again and again, but I also began to collect translations of it in several languages. Heavy sigh... so romantic!"
- Heather Wade
Assistant Professor/University Archivist

"I am a typical modern day romance novel reader, but I have a love for my Jane Austen. I don't play favorites so I like them all. [Thank goodness they finally compiled them all in one book!] No one can write like her and plus there are now movies to make her love stories come to life."
- Elise McDonald
Circulation Student Assistant

"I really enjoy reading novels by Danielle Steele."
- Kathy Redeker
Library Assistant II

... located in the William Allen White Library!
ESU Archives personnel have produced three displays in conjunction with this month’s Lincoln Symposium.

A tandem-display that showcases Emporia-native William Allen White’s interests in Abraham Lincoln is currently on view in two campus locations. The first part of the display, “We are Coming, Father Abraham: William Allen White Reflects on Lincoln,” located in the display case at the East end of Plumb Hall, near the Administration offices, discusses White’s writings on Lincoln.

The White display continues in an exhibit case near the Reference Desk on the second floor of the White Library. Here, one can view William Allen White’s personal copies of several books on Lincoln. Other books belonging to White on Lincoln are on display at Red Rocks; William Allen White’s home in Emporia, located at 917 Exchange Street.

Also near the Reference Desk on the second floor of the White Library, a display highlighting some of the children’s books on Lincoln’s life and times that were published by celebrated children’s book editor May Massee between the 1920s and the 1960s are exhibited. The original art work for one of the books, James Daugherty’s biography, Abraham Lincoln, are on display in the May Massee Gallery, room 308B of the White Library.

Each display will run through early March. Please contact Archives personnel at 620-341-6431 or archives@emporia.edu with any questions about Lincoln-related materials in the University’s rare and historical collections.
