New Strategic Plan

Guiding Emporia State University for the Next Five Years: The New Strategic Plan

In the summer of 2007, efforts began to produce a new strategic plan for Emporia State University. The process entailed nine work groups composed of faculty, students, staff, administrators, and community members. The first two work groups on Governing Ideas and Environmental/Institutional Analysis completed their work the end of October 2007 and the remaining seven work groups started their work November 1, 2007. These seven work groups included Critical Resources, Distinctive Academic Programs, Graduate Education, Internationalization of ESU, Outreach and Lifelong Learning, Public Engagement and Service, and Undergraduate Education.

The Governing Ideas work group produced a new mission statement which the Kansas Board of Regents has approved:

Emporia State University is a dynamic and progressive student-centered learning community that fosters student success through engagement in academic excellence, community and global involvement, and the pursuit of personal and professional fulfillment.

During the summer of 2008, the reports and supporting documents — see Plan, page 3 — will help counteract personnel shortages in Kansas school districts and make the process of earning a secondary education teaching license more accessible to potential graduates.

ESU wins Association of Teacher Educators award

An innovative program for preparing new teachers for success in the classroom has earned recognition for the two educational organizations collaborating on the project. The Association of Teacher Educators has presented its 2008 Award for the Distinguished Program in Teacher Education to the Professional Development School (PDS) program developed by Emporia State University and Olathe Unified School District 233.

The award was presented at the association’s annual meeting earlier this year.

The ATE award recognizes and honors outstanding teacher education programs that exemplify collaboration between local education agencies and institutions of higher education in program development and administration.

Dr. Tes Mehring, then dean of The Teachers College at ESU and now Provost/VP of Academic Affairs at ESU, is understandably proud of the award. “We began the Professional Development School model over a decade ago in collaboration with the Olathe District Schools. In addition to Dr. Jean Morrow and faculty in Early Childhood and Elementary Teacher Education at Emporia State, the administration, principals and teachers in the Olathe school district were brave enough to help us design and implement a better way of preparing teachers.”

Echoing Mehring’s praise is Dr. Michael R. Lane, ESU president. “It is indeed a tribute to the efforts of this team that their work has been recognized and honored through the ATE award,” said Lane.

The PDS is a field-based, clinical school experience for seniors majoring in elementary education in The Teachers College at ESU. The program reflects three components of The Teachers College and honors outstand- ing teacher education programs that exemplify collaboration between local education agencies and institutions of higher education in program development and administration.

ESU offers Alternate Route program

Has the employment outlook in your present field taken a downturn? Are you in the midst of re-evaluating the kind of work you want to do? A new program being launched by The Teachers College at ESU offers career-change opportunities in the fields of education, school counseling, and library media specialist.

In doing so, the Alternate Route/Restricted License Program (www.emporia.edu/teach/altroute.htm) will help counteract personnel shortages in Kansas school districts and make the process of earning a secondary education teaching license more accessible to potential graduates.

“We’ve never done this on a statewide basis before in Kansas,” explained Dr. Kirsten Limpert, the director of the program.

To be considered for the program, applicants must have earned a bachelor’s or master’s degree in the area in which they will teach. “For instance, for someone who wants to teach math, we’d be looking for a degree in mathematics,” said Limpert, adding that the program is especially geared toward alleviating the shortage of math and science teachers and school counselors in the state.

OUTSTANDING RECENT GRADUATES

One of the three alumni recognized as Outstanding Recent Graduates is a product of The Teachers College. Todd Wheat (BSE ’01, MS ‘04), Olathe, is the principal of Northview Elementary School for the 2008-09 school year, after serving as an administrative principal intern at the Arbor Creek and Sunnyside schools the past two years. He began his career teaching second and then sixth grade, and is now pursuing his doctorate of education. He is a strong advocate for ESU, remaining active in campus Greek affairs and the Sigma Tau Gamma fraternity, demonstrating enthusiasm and reaching out to young people while financially supporting student scholarships. After serving as a Kansas state senator, Stephens taught graduate classes, coordinated an accreditation self-study for the university, and served as the Greek alumni liaison. As an active member of the community, he serves on the Humane Society and Emporia Granada Theatre boards, and is an officer of Emporia Sunrise Rotary.

Loewen’s most recent award-winning book, “Sundown Towns: A Hidden Dimension of American Racism,” provides the backdrop for his Emporia State University address.

The Bonner and Bonner Diversity Lecture Series was established in 1992 to recognize ESU’s commitment to diversity. It is named in honor of Dr. Thomas Bonner and Dr. Mary Winstead Bonner, Emporia State University’s first and second African American faculty members.

tion from each of the work groups were turned over to the writing team (Betsy Yanik, Kenna Reeves, Bill Barnes, Ken Weaver, Jim Williams, Tes Mehring) for conversion into a draft of the strategic plan. The resulting plan is constructed around five strategic themes aligned with the mission statement:

STRATEGIC THEME #1 - To enhance academic excellence by providing opportunities that lead to increasing levels of student success through excellence in curricular development and deliveries, facilities, and technologies that meet the educational requirements of members of the Emporia State University community.

STRATEGIC THEME #2 - To increase the number of opportunities students, faculty, and staff have to engage with local, regional and national entities to develop and manage mutually beneficial partnerships.

STRATEGIC THEME #3 - To enhance the opportunities for the Emporia State University community to engage in international learning.

STRATEGIC THEME #4 - To improve communication among all University stakeholders.

STRATEGIC THEME #5 - To provide an attractive, welcoming, and sustainable environment for students, employees, and visitors.

Four public forums were held during September 2008, and the writing team will be working during October on analyzing the feedback relative to hone the strategic plan before it is turned over to the implementation team. The draft of the strategic plan is available at www.emporia.edu/strategicplanning/working_document.pdf. All Teachers College alumni are encouraged to read the draft strategic plan and submit any comments, concerns, or suggestions to Dr. Elizabeth Yanik, Associate Vice-President for Academic Affairs, at eyanik@emporia.edu.

He writes, “I sailed the east coast and Bahamas in a sailboat the last 5 yrs and have that boat for sale now. I still like sailing, history, economics, biography and eclectic other nonfiction. Also I am in-and-out of genealogy as I feel like it. I married Sharon Vay Lauderdale, a KSTC Sigma Kappa in 1969. We have one son, Erik.” Alan is a retired computer systems analyst of the Kansas City social security regional office.

Students enrolled in the Alternate Route program work as paid teaching interns while they earn their teaching certification, a process that requires between one and three years to complete.

The nine hours of coursework will include topics related to principles of learning and teaching, addressing needs of exceptional children, and classroom management.

“All the coursework is delivered online, so the students choose the time and place that’s most convenient for them to complete it,” said Limpert.

The Teachers College at Emporia State University is a nationally-recognized teacher education program. It was named one of four “model” teacher preparation programs in the nation in the report, “Educating School Teachers,” written by Dr. Arthur Levine, president emeritus of Columbia University Teachers College. Currently, one in every six classroom teachers in Kansas holds a degree or licensure endorsement from ESU.

Thaiad Travels

Ken Morrison, a graduate student in Instructional Design and Technology, was one of several ESU students who travelled with Dr. Dusti Howell this summer to teach in Thailand. Morrison writes: “If I could put Thailand in a bottle and keep it forever, it would be my memories from this school...Many (students) are left by their parents who walk for a week singing and saying goodbye to their children as they take them to a school in hopes that the kids will have a chance at a more promising future if they get an education. And as a teacher you get a true sense of how much these parents trust you. It was overwhelming.”

Six undergraduate students studying in the Department of Psychology, Art Therapy, Rehabilitation, and Mental Health Counseling have been awarded Teacher’s College Scholarships for outstanding academic achievement and involvement in department activities. The students are: Cade Amend, Krissy Cortez, Joanna Gilliam, Myles Louderback, Thomas Martin, and Anna Zappone.

On sabbatical
Phil Bennett, Fall 2008 – Dr. Bennett, Associate Dean, is on sabbatical during the Fall 2008. He is living and working in Washington, DC at the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education. His goal is to understand the content, length, and nature of field experiences and clinical practices in NCATE accredited institutions. This includes an investigation of the partnerships developed with P-12 schools and the types and structure of field experiences and clinical practice offered. Ultimately, the purpose of the study is to examine the impact of field experiences and clinical practices in initial and advanced level programs on candidate learning.

“I feel my real contribution to NCATE is to provide an institutional perspective during their meetings,” Bennett said. “While I think it has been an ‘eye opener’ to the NCATE staff, they have been very receptive and have even solicited my input.”

Dusti Howell, Fall 2008 – Dr. Howell, Associate Professor in the Instructional Design and Technology Department, is currently in Thailand on sabbatical. Among his goals during this time is the establishment of the Hill Tribe Teaching Project in northern Thailand as a joint venture between Emporia State University and Legacy Institute. This included having several ESU students accompany him to Chiang Mai, Thailand (see page 4). Together, they set up a computer lab in the community and to find out the feasibility and effectiveness of 17 different ESL software packages. Long range plans for this class over the next few years are to integrate internet via satellite and the One Laptop Per Child (OLPC) initiative from Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT). (The May 20, 2007 episode on CBS’s 60 Minutes featured this program).

Howell wrote, “When these $100 laptops are eventually allowed into Thailand we want to have the software and educational logistics worked out so we will be prepared to use these on a much bigger scale.” To find out more, visit www.cbsnews.com/stories/2007/05/20/60minutes/main2830058.shtml and laptop.org/en/vision/index.shtml.
Two present at Oxford Round Table

This summer, Dr. Matt Seimears, assistant professor, early childhood/elementary teacher education, and Dr. Stuart Ervay, professor, school leadership/middle & secondary teacher education, traveled to England to take part in the Oxford Round Table. The purpose of the Oxford Round Table, a not-for-profit educational organization, is to provide an interdisciplinary forum for the discussion of contemporary issues that affect the public good in all its various forms and ramifications.

Seimears presentation was “No Child Left Behind vs. Constructivism”; Ervay’s was on “The Nebraska STARS Program and NCLB: A Contrast in Educational Philosophies.”

The Round Table is not a conference in the conventional sense, but rather an opportunity for select leaders in both the public and private sectors, as well as scholars, to discuss government policy over a five-day period in a collegial, “think-tank” atmosphere in the ancient city of Oxford.

Oxford Round Table began 20 years ago at the University of Oxford. The Oxford Round Table conducts educational forums and seminars. Invitees to Round Table are determined based on several criteria, among which are nominations by earlier attendees, courses that invitees teach, their presentations and writings, and their professional involvement in a relevant area of interest.

“You are never told how you were selected to present and attend,” Seimears said. The experience was “a great enrichment experience…At my specific Round Table, there were experts from Poland, Netherlands, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, Kansas, Ohio, New Jersey, Florida, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Indiana, Minnesota, California, South Carolina, Arkansas, Germany, and Michigan.”

Professor participates in dietary supplement research practicum

Dietary supplements—the substances that can supply additional vitamins, minerals and other nutrients to a person’s diet—require users to exercise their brains as well as their muscles. So says Paul Luebbers, Ph.D., assistant professor of health, physical education and recreation at ESU.

“I want my students to be critical thinkers when it comes to dietary supplements,” said Luebbers. “What works for one person might not be right for another.”

Luebbers recently joined more than 100 other professors and graduate students from throughout the U.S. and Canada to participate in the National Institutes of Health (NIH) Office of Dietary Supplements (ODS) course, “Dietary Supplement Research Practicum 2008.” The practicum was on the NIH campus in Bethesda, Md., in June.

ODS offers the practicum as an intensive course to provide essential knowledge of dietary supplements to academic faculty and students with a serious interest in the subject. Experts from NIH, academic institutions, and federal regulatory agencies such as the U.S. Food and Drug Administration served as speakers.

At ESU, Luebbers teaches a class on ergogenic issues in the HPER curriculum, focusing on nutrition and dietary supplements and their potential to be used as ergogenic aids. “An ergogenic is anything that can be used to enhance a person’s capacity to do work,” Luebbers explained. “Dietary supplements like creatine, whey protein, and even certain vitamins and minerals can fall in that category, because they may help people exercise better or get better results from their exercise.”

In Fall 2007, Walter S. and Evan C. Jones Foundation trustees made an offer to high school seniors in Coffey, Lyon and Osage counties: attend Emporia State University in the fall after you graduate from high school, and the foundation will provide the student a $500 tuition voucher for each of the fall and spring semesters.

Recipients must be either a high school senior graduating in the current school year, or a student who has received a GED in the past two school years. Participants redeem a certificate awarded by the Jones Foundation for $500 each semester, for a total of $1,000. The grant is made during the student’s freshman year only, but may be added to any other scholarship or financial aid the student receives.

Since 1974, the Walter S. and Evan C. Jones Foundation has assisted families seeking financial help with medical, dental and vision expenses. The Foundation also acts on requests from students for help with their post-secondary education expenses in the form of grants for tuition and books.

The Emporia Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association (ABWA) has established a scholarship to support its belief in the importance of higher education and to provide an educational opportunity for students.

The endowed fund at the Emporia State University Foundation will provide scholarships to full-time ESU students with a minimum 3.0 grade point average, and first preference will be given to students who are residents of Lyon, Chase, Greenwood, Osage, Morris or Coffey counties.

ESU freshmen who graduated from Emporia High School are eligible for the newly created Don & Elaine Ek Family Scholarship Fund. Established by Emporia natives and EHS graduates Greg, John, and Larry Ek in honor of their parents Don and Elaine, the scholarship is designed to aid business and education students.

When Dr. William F. Phillips, a geography professor for 30 years at ESU, passed away earlier this year, his wife Marylee Phillips of Emporia had an idea. William’s cousin Vernita Rich was already recognized in a memorial scholarship, and Marylee knew how close the cousins were. Marylee combined the funds, creating the William F. Phillips and Vernita Rich Memorial Scholarship to provide a legacy for both.

The scholarship is reserved for students with a GPA of 3.5 or above majoring in special education or the social sciences.

Las Casitas Association Community Foundation has established a scholarship fund at ESU for Emporia High School graduates, intending to encourage local students to continue their education within the Emporia community. The scholarship is reserved for full-time ESU students with a minimum GPA of 2.8 who are Emporia High School graduates. The recipients will be selected by the university’s general scholarship committee.

The Las Casitas Association was founded to help educate Hispanic youth on the history of “La Colonia,” Emporia’s oldest Hispanic community, in order to preserve Hispanic culture and heritage and maintain the Emporia neighborhoods, or barrios, for future generations.
